Annie had a passion for country music and loved playing her guitar, fiddle and piano. She enjoyed playing for family, friends, and more recently her community church. Annie often performed at family gatherings and for surrounding First Nation communities with her sister Lima and brother Henry. She was a great artist, in her own rite, and produced exceptional quill work and designs. She will leave behind her quillwork as timeless treasures of art. In her younger years she worked as a visiting home-maker in Toronto, which reflected her kind and caring nature. Annie cherished the time she spent with her family and friends, especially her grandchildren. She will be sadly missed by all who knew her.
